Ford Motors to raise prices

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. says it will raise car prices around 3 to 6 per cent this fall, making it the last of the Big Three auto makers to announce price increases and the first to indicate how big the hikes may be.

General Motors and Chrysler said last week that price increases are unavoidable because of continued cost increases. Neither, however, would indicate the size of the price boosts.

American Motors has not said it will raise prices, but the company is expected to follow the pricing trend of its larger competitors.

Meanwhile, GM confirmed Thursday that its Supplemental Unemployment Benefits (SUB) fund has run dry, cutting in half jobless pay for 55,000 laidoff production workers.

GM said the last batch of SUB checks went out in the mail this week. The auto giant said it did not know when it would be able to resume payments, which were exhausted by extensive, long-term layoffs.

Ford President Lee Iacocca estimated during a news conference Thursday that the firm's car prices would rise roughly from 3 to 6 per cent, or an average $150 to $300 per car.

"Three to five, six per cent — that's the ballpark we hope to play in," Iacocca said. "But we may be off $200."

"We can't operate without a price increase," Ford Chairman Henry Ford II said Thursday following the company's annual shareholders' meeting in suburban Dearborn. He said final pricing decisions have not yet been made.

Ford said he hoped the price increases would not discourage sales. He conceded the record $450 price hike the industry put through on 1975 models last fall helped throw car sales into their worst slump since World War II.

Financial analysts say the companies may try to limit increases to about $150 so as not to further stall an already weak market.

GM is the second auto company to exhaust its SUB fund because of massive layoffs dating back more than a year. Chrysler's fund for 35,000 laid off workers ran out April 1.

SUB funds at Ford and AMC, where layoffs have been less extensive, remain in "relatively healthy" shape, according to the United Auto Workers, which negotiated for SUB 20 years ago.

The average laid-off GM worker had been living on $176 a week, about 95 per cent of his take-home pay. About $92 came from the SUB fund. Most continue to receive an average $84 a week in government unemployment compensation.

The exhaustion of SUB is expected to be especially harsh on auto towns like Flint, where GM owns seven major plants — including its Buick factory — and had been paying about $3 million a month in SUB benefits.

GM has paid out $400 million in SUB payments since January 1974. In Michigan, where GM estimated 24,400 workers will lose SUB, the company said it has paid out $178 million.

Some 110,000 of GM's 400,000 hourly workers are on indefinite layoff, but 10,000 are not represented by the UAW, and thus ineligible for SUB.

Caution: aerosols maybe hazardous

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission said today that aerosol products kill an estimated 125 Americans annually, most of them young people who deliberately inhale everything from spray paint to deodorant to produce a "high."

The commission's estimate, based on examination of death certificates nationwide, was prepared for a meeting with industry leaders today to determine whether federal action is needed to curb aerosol abuse.

Aerosols are also under attack because of suspicions their fluorocarbon propellants may harm the earth's ozone, which shields the planet from ultraviolet radiation. The industry has denied this.

Manufacturers and inventors were asked to describe what has been accomplished since hearings 13 months ago to discourage intentional misuse, prevent accidental spraying into the eyes and determine potentially harmful effects from long-term use and exposure.

In 77 death certificates from 40 states over an 18-month period ending in December 1974, the agency's Bureau of Epidemiology found aerosols the culprit. The agency's estimate of 125 deaths annually was derived from this finding.

All the deaths were the result of intentional abuse except for the case of a motorist who sprayed a can of vaporizer inside his car. Two elderly persons committed suicide with aerosols, the commission said.

At least 31 of the 77 deaths were attributed to the spray shortening Pam, and the rest to an assortment of spray paints, deodorants, fabric sprays and aerosolized Bactine.

The victims ranged in age from 0 to 29, with 60 of the 77 victims between the ages of 13 and 19. The commission said 63 were males and 14 females.

Medical investigators have established that fluorocarbons used as propellants in the spray cans result in almost instantaneous cardiac arrest, when the fumes are concentrated inside a plastic bag and "huffed" by the victim.

The commission has under consideration a November 1973 petition from the Washington-based Center for Science in the Public Interest, urging a federal investigation of aerosol products for toxic chemicals and explosion hazards and a nationwide consumer education campaign to discourage the use of household aerosol products.

Three other petitions called for aerosol bans in the interest of personal safety and environmental protection.

The commission has estimated that about 5,000 persons are treated in hospital emergency wards every year for aerosol-related injuries. A recent staff report concluded, however, that the injury ratio is small compared with the three billion cans produced annually and does not warrant a complete ban.

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Sen. George McGovern says that "with a little leadership" in Washington the U.S. isolation of Cuba can be ended.

The South Dakota Democrat, who flew back to Washington on Thursday after a four-day visit to Havana, considers it essential to re-establish contacts with Cuba to achieve a more favorable balance of power in the area in view of current Soviet influence on the Caribbean island.

The senator said that Prime Minister Fidel Castro feels the U.S. trade embargo makes Cuba "an outcast" and is an insult to Cuban pride.

In Washington, the foreign ministers of the Organization of American States opened an 11-day meeting Thursday with the focus on economic issues. The end of the OAS boycott to Cuba was not on the agenda for the meeting.

Ford will invest

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford plans to invest his in savings bonds.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns is going to buy something for his wife.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., will repay some of the money he had to borrow to pay his income taxes.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., will let their wives spend theirs.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., probably will put his into the bank or into yard work.

And Sens. Russell B. Long, D-La., and Robert Dole, R-Kan., haven't decided.

Those were some of the responses from government officials who were asked how they planned to spend their tax rebate checks.

In coming weeks, the government will send checks of up to $200 to each of the nation's taxpayers, refunding a total of more than $8 billion.

President Ford proposed the rebates earlier this year as a way of putting more money into the economy and helping end the current recession.

The first checks, dated today, were mailed Wednesday and Thursday and should start showing up in mail boxes within a day or two.

A spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said approximately 13.7 million checks are being mailed in the first week and that all of an estimated 78 million rebate checks will be sent by June 15.

The IRS said rebates will be mailed more or less in the order in which taxpayers filed their 1974 returns, with persons who filed their returns early receiving the first checks.

Basically, taxpayers will receive 10 per cent of the amount they paid in 1974 income taxes up to a maximum of $200. However, taxpayers who paid at least $100 in taxes would receive a rebate of at least $100, even if that would be more than 10 per cent of their tax bill. Thus, a person who paid $500 in taxes will receive a $100 rebate, not $50.

Persons who paid less than $100 in taxes will get all of their taxes back, but no more.

Top cabinet leaders forced out in Laos

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Five cabinet ministers closely identified with U.S. policy have resigned from Laos' coalition government under mounting pressure from student groups and labor leaders, highly placed sources in Vientiane said today.

The development, which comes within a month of the fall of Cambodia and South Vietnam to Communist-led forces, virtually eliminated the rightist faction in Laos. They seem certain to mean the Communist-line Pathet Lao, who hold six cabinet portfolios under the terms of the 1973 cease-fire agreement, will emerge in a vastly strengthened position.

The reported resignations, which include those of the ministers of defense, finance, public health, foreign affairs and public works, came after Laotian students protesting rising prices and foreign economic domination hurled rocks at the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane and tried to haul down the American flag.

Observers said the resignations, coupled with an order by Prime Minister Prince Souvanna Phouma to the rightist forces not to fight Pathet Lao forces, appear to mark the beginning of the final act leading to a peaceful Pathet Lao takeover.

The exodus of wealthy Lao, Chinese and Vietnamese continued and many shops in Vientiane were shuttered, but there has been no sign of the panic rush that marked the exodus from Saigon before it fell.

The U.S. Embassy denied it was evacuating Americans from Laos but an embassy spokesman said the numbers of Americans in Laos had dropped and would continue to do so as part of a long range cutback program.

During the demonstration at the U.S. Embassy, a U.S. Marine guard snatched the flag from two students before it hit the ground and Pathet Lao and government police drove the students back from the compound. No injuries were reported.

Meanwhile, Saigon radio reports said long distance buses and trains are beginning services in South Vietnam where for years flying was the only safe way to travel. Cambodia reported that it had begun a campaign to clean up "the stink and pungent smells left behind by the traitors," and to open its chief seaport, Kompong Som.

Associated Press correspondent Peter O'Loughlin reported from Vientiane that the demonstration by more than 3,000 students and teachers began at the baroque Victory Monument a few blocks from the U.S. Embassy.

McGovern says isolation can end

However, Mexican Foreign Minister Emilio Rabasa said he would attempt to revise the treaty under which sanctions were invoked so that they could be lifted by a simple majority vote instead of the present two-thirds requirement.

In a nationwide radio-television speech Thursday night, Castro criticized the United States and said only the Soviet Union's power is holding back American aggression throughout the world.

Speaking at ceremonies commemorating the 30th anniversary of the signing of the German surrender in World War II, Castro declared:

"If the imperialists — today in their energy and raw materials crisis — do not jump with the knife in their mouths to divide up anew the natural resources of the world, to castigate any nationalizations of those resources, it is simply because the Soviet Union and the Socialist camp exist."

The Cuban leader did not mention the McGovern visit and the subject of U.S.-Cuban relations in his speech, monitored in Miami. He belittled the American role in World War II and criticized what he said were American threats and armed aggressions against Cuba, Vietnam and other nations.

Castro praised the Soviet Union's "extraordinary and decisive role" in defeating fascism during World War II and Russia's "maintenance of the peace" since then.

McGovern and Castro, who talked together for a total of more than eight hours, voiced open admiration for each other and expressed the common faith that the 15-year-old U.S. trade embargo imposed on Cuba would be lifted.

However, McGovern pointed out that even though he is a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he did not come to Cuba to negotiate on behalf of the U. S. government and only time would tell what might result from their conversations.

The senator said he considers Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger a "skilled negotiator" who will find a way to get over the hump of the trade barrier controversy. He added that Castro is "a realist" who understands the time that may be needed to achieve a major reorientation in American foreign policy.

Foster home plan made at meeting

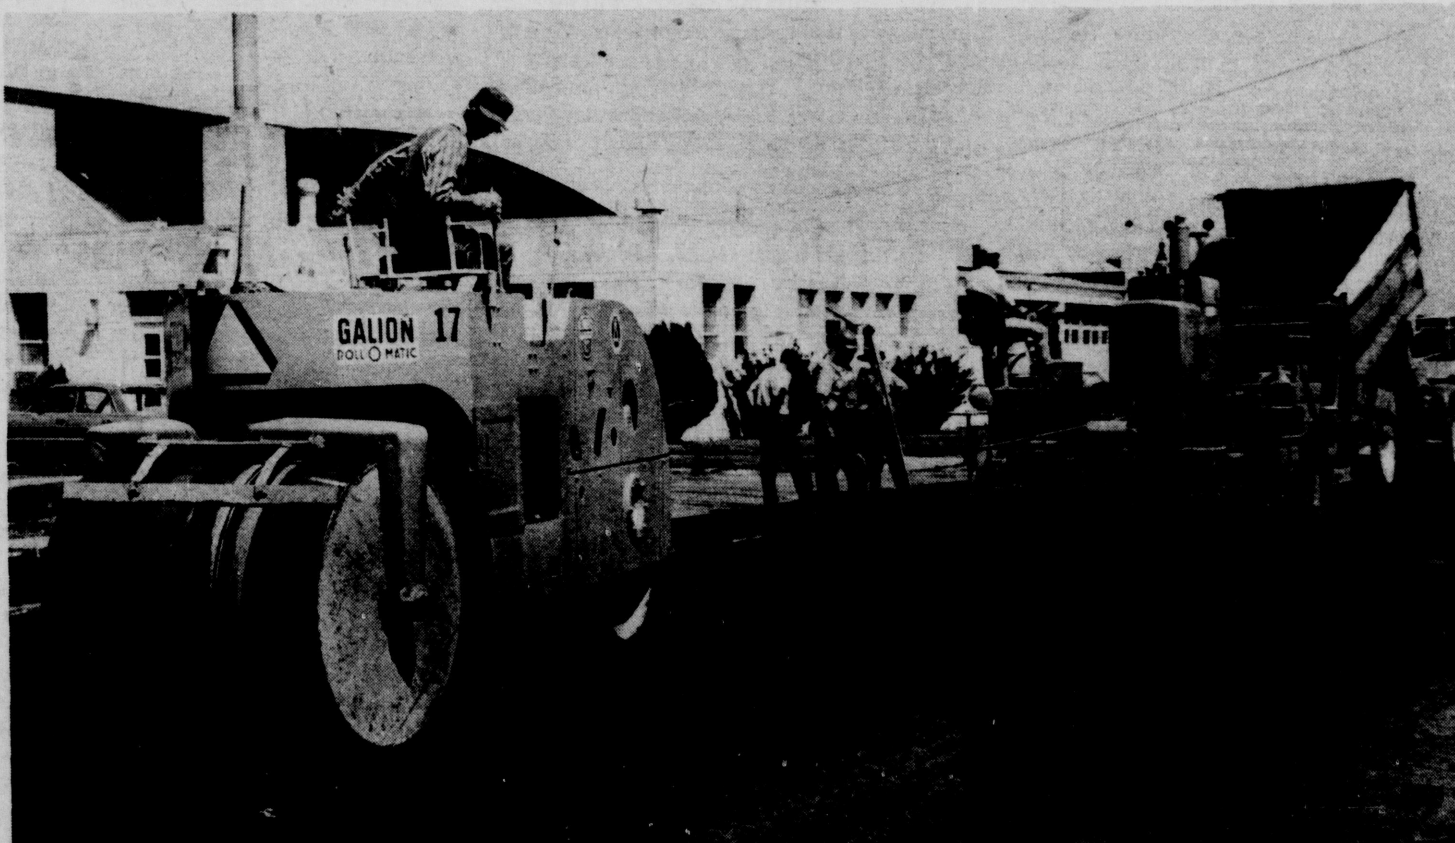

A proposal to establish a county foster home program, specifically aimed to serve juveniles who face court sentencing, was presented Thursday night at a meeting of the Sedalia Drug Abuse Council at the Municipal Building Council Chambers.

The program, council chairman Earl Finley said, would provide a third alternative for judges to consider when imposing sentences on juvenile offenders. Now, he said, judges must either sentence youths to state juvenile correction centers or put them on probation.

"We feel that, by offering this third choice, we will be able to provide a better solution to many situations," Finley said. "This program is not designed for only young drug offenders, but, rather, for youths who face court action for many reasons."

Under the program, these youths would be sent to foster homes in an effort to provide an environment more conducive to rehabilitation.

Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming, head of a council subcommittee investigating the foster home idea, is expected to soon approach Show-Me Regional Planning Commission officials to request a $15,000 grant to fund the

Contempt citation raises queries

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Events that led a Washington, D.C., ecclesiastical court to cite the Episcopal Church's presiding bishop, John M. Allin, for contempt have unleashed a wave of questions, bafflement and controversy.

How did it happen? What were the accumulating factors? What details were involved in the process that eventuated in the head of the Church being cited for contempt for failing to heed a subpoena to testify?

His attorney, Hugh R. Jones, this week contended the court erred in not excusing him, that it overstepped its authority and didn't give him a chance to defend himself before he was cited. But the court maintained his excuses were insufficient, and that it gave him ample notice and consideration.

To clarify some of the circumstances, here is a play-by-play sequence of the affair:

On April 7, on application of the defense in the disciplinary case against a Washington pastor, the Rev. William Wendt, a subpoena was served on Bishop Allin to appear as a witness at the trial starting April 30.

Father Wendt was accused of disobeying his bishop by allowing one of 11 irregularly ordained women to lead a Communion service.

On April 9, Bishop Allin moved to quash the subpoena, saying he recognized the canonically specified duty of all Church members to give evidence when duly cited, but that he had "no firsthand knowledge" in the case, and could not offer competent testimony.

On April 11, the court issued morning of the trial, Wednesday, April 30, so he could leave later for Toronto, Canada, where he had a speech to give that night.

On April 25, however, Bishop Allin sent a telegram saying he had commitments April 30 through May 5 in Canada, Arizona and Missouri and "I am unable to accept the invitation" to testify. He suggested the court could take a deposition, in his absence, if needed.

Meanwhile, his attorney Jones apparently had returned to advise him.

On April 26, the court issued another order, saying the bis-

On Friday, May 2, the trial's last day, he sent another telegram, expressing regret at "some confusion" about the subpoena and again saying he could not make it because of other commitments, repeating his offer of a deposition.

On the same day, so as not to leave ground for a mistrial, the prosecution and defense agreed on a stipulation that he would have testified—as had his predecessor, Bishop John E. Hines—that the bishops' vote holding the women's ordination invalid carried no legislative authority.

On the same day, the five-member court issued its judgment, saying:

"Since he has disregarded the subpoena and our ex-plicitation and is in violation of the canon, and ... has proceeded to attend on matters which the court had deemed insufficient to excuse him by this Second day of May, 1975, ad-judge and declare that John M. Allin ... is in contempt of the ecclesiastical court."

Lifestyle can control angina

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 36 and recently discovered I am a mild diabetic (controlled by diet) and have high blood which is under control with medication. What are my chances of a successful pregnancy? Also, what complications do you foresee?

I have had two children by a previous marriage, ages 13 and 3. I would appreciate your answer as doctors I have talked to do not agree. Both illnesses seem to be inherited.

Dear Reader — Your question is a tough one. That's why you have gotten different answers from different doctors.

In general, if a woman is a mild diabetic and has no complications, she can expect to have a normal pregnancy with little risk to either herself or her baby. The risk is increased and even in mild diabetic mothers the chances of fetal mortality are greater.

Now, if the diabetes has caused vascular disease, usually meaning involvement of the arteries in the kidneys or in the eye, then the women should avoid pregnancy. Some authorities believe that if kidney or eye involvement occur during the pregnancy that the pregnancy should be interrupted and the woman sterilized to prevent future pregnancies. That means the risk in these cases is quite high and the chances of fetal mortality so great that such a course is thought advisable.

If by "high blood" you mean high blood pressure, I can see why a doctor would be reluctant to say so ahead. The decision needs to be based on how much real high blood pressure you have and the exact nature of your diabetes.

Some people diagnosed as mild diabetics may not have a really significant problem. There are several causes for temporary elevation of blood sugar. And, some of the medicines used in treating high blood pressure cause elevated blood sugar readings in people who are really not diabetics.

So, I couldn't possibly answer your question on the amount of information you have given me. You should have the matter looked into quite carefully before undertaking pregnancy.

If you get pregnant and do have complications I would think they would be loss of the baby or, in your case, the possibility of increasing vascular disease as a complication of diabetes. Of course, if you just have a high blood sugar because of a medicine you are taking for high blood pressure all of these ideas are out and it is a new ball game.

Diabetic specialists often advise diabetic women to be happy with a small family and not take the risk of increasing the severity of their disease.

Although there is a family tendency of diabetes it is not directly inherited. A person can be a diabetic, a non-diabetic or a carrier. What the children will be depends on what both parents are.

I would urge you to go to your nearest university medical center and see a diabetic specialist there. Your doctor can arrange this. I noted your address and realize you are a long way from such a center and that it will be expensive, but the importance of settling the question in your case, if you want to have more children, is great enough to justify both the expense and the effort.

Little known of Viet refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has previously opened its borders to hundreds of thousands of political refugees, but never before the current Vietnamese influx have so many come so suddenly about whom so little is known.

In 1956 and 1957, the immigration of more than 40,000 persons who fled Hungary was spread over 18 months. From 1961 to 1974, 460,000 Cuban refugees were absorbed, most into the Miami area during the mid-1960s.

In those two instances, the names and backgrounds of almost all who came were known to immigration officials before the refugees stepped on to U.S. soil.

History and geography combined to permit both migrations to be handled gradually and without the emergency aura underscored by the frantic evacuation of Saigon.

Nor was there the bitter resistance shown the new South Vietnamese arrivals and, in general, Cubans and Hungarians were welcomed without fear that they would take American jobs.

Hungarian refugee Istvan Gereben said Thursday he was "stunned" by the groundswell of resistance to the estimated 130,000 South Vietnamese either on their way or already in the United States.

"I am deeply troubled with this whole affair," Gereben said. "I have never been exposed to any kind of discrimination or that kind of bad-mouthing."

"I don't understand what happened in the last 18 years," said Gereben, who came to the United States in January 1957 along with his family aboard a crowded U.S. troop ship.

Other Hungarians came to the United States aboard U.S. Air Force or United Nations-sponsored transport planes. Almost all were taken to Camp Kilmer, N.J., a converted Army base where jobs and homes were found before the refugees moved on to lives in a new country.

In telephone interviews, Gereben and other refugees recalled that almost all Hungarians who came were members of professions or had job skills then needed in the U.S. economy.

All had been screened at refugee camps in Austria. One former immigrant remembered that "the United States took the cream of the crop" from among the estimated 190,000 Hungarians who fled when the Soviet Union stopped an anti-Communist revolt in Budapest with troops and tanks.

Gereben said Camp Kilmer, with its comfortably furnished wooden military barracks and adequate food and medical care, was home for most of the passing refugees for an average of two weeks.

Federal agency looks at Omaha tornado damage

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — An administrator for the Federal Disaster Assistance Agency (FDAA) said Thursday that 1,067 homes were not fit to live in after the Tuesday tornado that struck Omaha.

Francis X. Tobin, Region 7, FDAA administrator, said those persons will receive rent-free housing for up to one year.

The tornado-ravaged cities of Omaha, Ralston and Magnet in northeast Nebraska were designated Thursday as disaster areas under a declaration issued Wednesday by President Ford.

An aerial survey made by the Metropolitan Area Planning Agency after the tornado hit was compared with its standard map. Officials concluded that 5,236 persons were homeless, based on occupancy statistics.

Meanwhile, the long, hard job of cleaning up the debris from the funnels continued and a massive pickup of storm clutter is scheduled over the weekend.

In the metropolitan area, the twisters moved through Omaha and suburban Ralston killing three persons and injuring more than 100 others. Damage has been estimated at more than $500 million.

Tobin said about 1,500 persons were out work as a result of the damage. The Chamber of Commerce said 80 business places were damaged.

Mayor Edward Zorinsky said National Guard troops will remain in the battered southwestern and west-central sections of the city through the weekend to keep sightseers away.

Magnet, a tiny community in northeastern Nebraska, suffered an estimated $750,000 in damage but no serious injuries were reported.

an order for the defense to show cause why Bishop Allin's motion should not be granted.

On April 17, the defense replied that the bishop's appearance was "absolutely essential," and a principal source of information about a bishops' meeting he had called which termed the women's ordination invalid.

On April 18, the court denied Bishop Allin's motion, saying he must appear.

On April 22, defense attorney William Stringfellow telephoned the office of Bishop Allin's acting chancellor, Peter Brown—substituting for Jones who was away—and offering to make the bishop's appearance brief, at his convenience.

On April 24, at the Algonquin Hotel in New York, Stringfellow received a hand-delivered letter from Brown, arranging for Bishop Allin to testify the first op in his motion had been "completely silent" about any schedule conflict, cited the federal legal rules under which the court operated, and said a deposition would deprive the defendant of his rights, since the trial was scheduled to start shortly.

The court noted air shuttle schedules to allow the bishop to appear in Washington briefly and leave Wednesday with a "minimum of ... inconvenience," and repeated the subpoena still was in force, and he was expected to comply.

On April 30, the trial began. Then, and for three days, the bishop's name was called out. But he had left New York for a speech Wednesday night in Toronto, and a meeting next day with the new Archbishop of Canterbury, and then headed to Phoenix, Ariz., for a speech Friday night.

"The Grace of God Bestowed Upon Worthy Women," taken from John 19:27, will be the Sunday morning topic of the Rev. Milton Elmore, pastor of East Sedalia Baptist Church. His Sunday evening sermon will be on "The Providential Grace of God," taken from Romans 8:28.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church will observe Mother's Day in both services this Sunday. The Rev. Erhard Wolf, pastor, will speak on "What Is a Good Mother?" taken from Proverbs 31:30. Holy Communion will be celebrated in the 8 a.m. services.

"Adam and Fallen Man" will be the topic of conversation Sunday at the First Church of Christ Scientist. The Golden Text will be 1 John 5:18.

Items for "Church news" must be in The Democrat-Capital newsroom no later than noon Thursday for publication that week. Time required for editing and composing room operations makes this necessary.

Speaker

Aaron Rothganger, recently returned from missionary service in Vietnam, will share his experiences there at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the First Assembly of God Church. He will also offer an up-to-date report of the church and relief programs being carried on among the war-torn victims.

Seminary in exile to make a move

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Seminex, a seminary in exile set up by dissidents within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, will move out of its quarters at St. Louis University this summer, school officials said Wednesday.

A spokesman for Seminex said the move was caused by the Roman Catholic university's plans to use space currently occupied by the Lutherans.

But the Seminex spokesman said some classroom space and use of library facilities would still be open to Lutheran seminarians. He also said Seminex would look for space of its own within a few blocks of St. Louis University.

Seminex was formed last year when a doctrinal dispute caused the firing of most of the faculty at Concordia Seminary in suburban Clayton and most of the students walked off the campus in support of the teachers.

For years explorers tried to capture a Giant Panda, an animal that lives in the mountains of western China. It wasn't until 1937 that one was caught and sent to the Chicago Brookfield Zoo. Since then several others have been caught.

DEATH NOTICES

Charles B. Fox

Charles B. Fox, 87, died at the Fairview Nursing Home at 2:05 a.m. Friday. He had been a patient at the nursing home for the past year.

He was born at Springfield, Dec. 6, 1887, son of the late C.M. and Jessie Sadler Fox. He married Miss Mary Lillian Harmon at Scammon, Kan., Sept. 26, 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. Fox lived most of their married life at Pittsburg, Kan. Of recent years they have resided in Sedalia and Warrensburg.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary L. Fox, who is a patient in the Fairview Nursing Home; one daughter, Mrs. Loren (Mary) Hood, 913 South Carr; twin sons, Don C. Fox, Warrensburg, and Dale Fox, Topeka, Kan.; one sister, Mrs. Stella Hanley, Rockford, Ill.; a half-brother, Edwin Trail, Independence; seven grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at the Ewing Funeral Home at 1 p.m. Monday, with the Rev. Lawrence Stewart, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating.

The body is at the funeral home.

Bernadine W. Kraus

PILOT GROVE — Bernadine W. Kraus, 75, died Thursday at the Victoria Nursing Home, Kansas City.

She was born July 13, 1899, in Pilot Grove, daughter of Frank X. and Julia Wittman Kraus.

Survivors include one brother, Fred Kraus, Kansas City; and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church here with the Rev. Michael McHugh officiating.

Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Friends may call at the Painter-Woodard Funeral Home here until time of the services.

Miss Birdie Greene

Miss Birdie Greene, 80, 221 East Cooper, died Friday morning at Bothwell Hospital.

She spent her entire life in Sedalia and received her education in public schools here. She was a member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

Surviving is a sister-in-law, Mrs. Marie Green, 404 West Cooper.

The body is at the Alexander Funeral Home.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Woman is struck by car; condition is said serious

A Sedalia woman was listed in serious condition at noon Friday at Bothwell Hospital from injuries she suffered when she was struck by a car Friday morning.

Mrs. Martha J. Walje, 56, 718 East 15th, was taken to the hospital by ambulance following the accident at 10:15 a.m. Friday in the 700 block of East Broadway.

Police reported that Mrs. Walje was crossing the street with her groceries when she was struck by a 1974 Mercury, driven by Robert F. Forsberg, 63, 700 South Engineer. Mrs. Walje was reportedly knocked almost 50 feet after she was struck.

She suffered injuries to her left leg and a fractured pelvis.

No arrests were made in connection with the accident.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Kidwell-Garber Funeral Home here with the Rev. Bob Dunning officiating.

Burial will be in the Ritchie Cemetery, south of here.

The family will receive friends after noon Friday at the funeral home.

Mrs. Lola Mae Corwine

Funeral services for Mrs. Lola Mae Corwine, 81, 417 North Quincy, who died at the Bothwell Hospital Wednesday morning, will be held at the Ewing Funeral Home at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. The Rev. Lawrence Stewart, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will officiate.

Burial will be in the Memorial Park Cemetery.

Pallbearers will be I. B. Perdue, Ray Sandy, Ewing Gibson, Dr. T. J. Hopkins, A. B. Case and J. D. Case.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday at the funeral home.

Woman asks court to award damages

Hazel M. Smith, state of Louisiana, filed a damage suit in Pettis County Court late Wednesday afternoon seeking more than $7,000 in damages stemming from an auto accident.

Named as defendants in the suit are A.M.F., Inc., state of New Jersey; Paul Lee Kishline, Mason City, Iowa; and David Clark Kelley, Route 2.

According to the petition, A.M.F. had taken the Smith woman's recreational vehicle to its plant in Iowa for repairs and Kishline was hired by the firm to return the vehicle to her.

The woman alleges that her vehicle was struck from behind by a car driven by Kelley about 1.7 miles south of Route B on Highway 65 on Sept. 26, 1973. The petition cites both Kishline and Kelley for negligence in the operation of the vehicles involved and seeks a total judgement of $7,249.95 for damages to her vehicle and costs incurred as a result of the accident.

Hardin preliminary hearing scheduled

WARRENSBURG — The preliminary hearing for Carl Edward Hardin, 20, Warrensburg, charged with first degree murder, was scheduled for 2 p.m. today in Johnson County Magistrate Court here.

Hardin and Leon Vincent Taylor, 17, also of Warrensburg, are charged with the murder of Jesse Howarter, 62.

Howarter was stabbed to death on the night of April 1 in his studio apartment here. It is believed he interrupted an attempted burglary in a laundry located in the same building.

Taylor was bound over to Johnson County Circuit Court for trial following his preliminary hearing on April 25.

Both Hardin and Taylor remain in the Johnson County jail in lieu of $50,000 bond each.

program. The county would pay 10 per cent of the grant, $1,500, with the commission paying the rest.

If the commission approves the request, Fleming will then approach the Pettis County Court for the county's share of the cost, Finley said.

It was also announced at the meeting that information brochures, listing various local resources offering information or assistance on drug abuse, will soon be ready for distribution. Funds for the brochures, which are being printed at a cost of $40 by Smith-Cotton High School graphic arts students, were provided by the St. Paul's Lutheran School Parent-Teachers Association and the city.

Plans are currently under way for a public discussion on our "drug-oriented society," it was announced. Council member Dr. Robert Glass and a representative of a pharmaceutical firm will moderate the discussion, which is scheduled to be televised locally. No date has been set for the broadcast.

The council also announced the beginning of a program in which the council would formally endorse local persons and agencies involved in combating drug abuse.

"We hope that we will keep in better touch with all community agencies working toward our common goal of educating people on the dangers of drug abuse," Finley said.

Aid proposal may move slowly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is demonstrating solid support for emergency aid to Indochina refugees but not for the full $507 million requested by President Ford.

There were some indications that aid might not be passed so quickly as Ford wants, despite these actions in Congress on Thursday.

—The House Judiciary committee voted 30 to 4 to approve an unlimited authorization bill for the refugees.

—The House foreign operations appropriations subcommittee, which sets the dollar amounts to be spent, approved $405 million in aid, a cut from Ford's $507 million request.

—The Senate voted 91 to 1 to welcome the refugees.

—By voice vote, the Senate approved use of leftover Vietnam military aid money for the refugees.

However, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield called for "time for thought and deliberation."

Ford had hoped for action by next week but only House action is now expected by that time. The Senate cannot act until it receives the measure from the House, where all money bills must originate.

Ford's request for $507 million for up to 150,000 refugees was cut by the appropriations subcommittee with the idea of prorating it to the about 114,000 refugees that have actually been counted so far.

Subcommittee members contended some of the figures in Ford's estimate were clearly overstated but said the fact is that Congress has no idea how much the refugee programs will finally cost and that they likely will climb above $507 million.

Judiciary Committee approval of the unlimited authorization clears the way for House action next Tuesday or Wednesday. The authorization bill contains no money figure and the Appropriations Committee plans to put the separate $405-million appropriation bill to a vote quickly. The House must pass the authorizing bill before it can take up the appropriations bill.

The only "no" vote in the Senate action was cast by Sen. William L. Scott, R-Va.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, D-Ore., said his bill to permit use of military aid for the refugees would provide at least $17 million and possibly as much as $147 million. The Senate approved it by voice vote.

Off the floor, 27 senators signed a letter saying it would be a tragedy if a few vocal opponents were able to prevent congressional action "necessary to find homes, jobs and a fresh start for those whose lives have been shattered by the fall of South Vietnam."

But there was also opposition.

Saying he wants no "hired right-wing political killers," in America, Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., introduced a bill slashing aid to $127 million and prohibiting the Pentagon or the CIA from hiring any Vietnamese who participated in the controversial Phoenix program, which was designed by the CIA to eliminate Viet Cong cadres.

Abourezk's bill would require the $127 million in aid to be spent in 90 days and provide transportation money for any refugees who want to return to Indochina.

Billboard owners will be reimbursed for loss

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State dollars will go to billboard owners whose signs must come down, according to an amendment approved Thursday by the Missouri Senate to a proposed billboard law.

The bill itself, which lengthens the list of illegal signs, was held over for later consideration.

The amendment insuring just compensation for legally erected signs passed 14-11 over the objections of Sen. William Waters, D-Liberty, who said it would "line the pockets" of the billboard industry.

"Let's don't amend the bill to give the industry windfall," he said.

The approved amendment was a substitute for an earlier proposed change by Waters to allow compensation only if federal funds were available for it.

He objected to Sen. Richard Webster's successful amendment because he claimed it would provide payment even if billboard owners did not comply with State Highway Department regulations.

Webster, a Carthage Republican, said his only concern was that constitutional provisions providing for just compensation be upheld.

Waters said payment to billboard owners could run as much as $18.2 million, but Sen. Robert Young, D-St. Ann, the bill's sponsor, said federal funds should pay 75 per cent of the cost.

The Senate must approve the billboard measure or face the loss of federal highway funds.

The Senate also gave final approval to a bill about the law on state training schools, sending it to the House for further consideration.

The bill, costing about $376,000 to implement, would establish a Division of Youth Services to oversee juvenile offenders and hire about 19 additional professional counselors.

Other measures given tentative approval would require all motor boats to be licensed, exempt veterinarians, architects and engineers from professional license fees and boost the pay of county court judges.

The raises would range from $1,200 to $1,500 a year in second class counties and from $1,000 to $1,200 in third and fourth class counties.

Kissinger, Gromyko

plan to hold meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko tentatively plan to meet somewhere in Europe May 19, informed diplomatic sources said today.

State Department officials declined to confirm that such a meeting was scheduled. Kissinger's travel plans will be announced early next week, it was understood.

Kissinger and Gromyko have periodic meetings when Kissinger travels to Europe or to the Middle East.

The Shah of Iran will be Washington's official guest May 15-18 and Kissinger will attend the talks with the monarch.

Reagan says GOP can win

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The Republican party can regain the mandate it won in the 1972 Presidential election if it sticks to traditional Republican values, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan said here Thursday night.

Reagan addressed a $50-a-plate fund raising dinner for Rep. Gene Taylor, R-Mo., speaking to more than 1,000 enthusiastic supporters.

"In the 1972 election the people of this country repudiated an expansion of the welfare state," Reagan said. "They repudiated an erosion, a giving away of our strength as a world leader."

Reagan said that while the 1974 election was a disaster for Republicans "only the politically myopic will say that disaster represented a repudiation of what we believe."

Watergate broke up the 1972 Nixon constituency and hurt the Republicans in 1974, Reagan said, adding that the mandate can be restored by restoring the old principles of Republicanism.

One traditional Republican theme which Reagan said must be returned to is fiscal conservatism. He said if the country abandons its fight against inflation to try to deal with the recession, it could lead to inflation as high as 20 per cent and, ultimately, economic disaster.

Reagan said the country needs to endure the recession in order to stop rising prices. He said he opposes the tax cut bill recently signed into law because it is inflationary.

"There's one answer and one only to how to stop inflation, and that's to balance the federal budget," Reagan said.

State plans to study malpractice insurance

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A task force to study medical malpractice insurance in Missouri was announced today by Alfred C. Sikes, director of the Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing.

Sikes said the task force, to be named within a week, will try to determine the causes of soaring malpractice insurance rates and make recommendations for long-term remedies.

Sikes said Missouri apparently is subsidizing other states with poorer malpractice records because of the rate setting methods used by insurance companies.

He cited national figures saying that by 1982 one of every two doctors will be sued for malpractice each year and the total amount per claim will rise to $48,000. The trend has made insurance companies wary of providing coverage for doctors and hospitals, Sikes said.

Some insurance companies are dropping their malpractice clients altogether and the Washington University Medical School in St. Louis and the University of Missouri-Columbia Medical Center have been dropped already and forced to seek new coverage.

The Missouri Senate already has passed and sent to the House a bill allowing doctors and hospitals to form mutual assessment associations to insure themselves.

Sikes said in studying the causes of the rising malpractice costs, the task force will examine the breakdown of traditional doctor-patient relationships and will explore possible alternatives to the present claim-paying system.

No more tickets available for play

No tickets remain for the Sedalia Junior High School production of Alice in Watergate, a satire on the Watergate scandal, which will be presented at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the junior high school.

Principal Larry Smithson said Thursday the 300 tickets printed for the play have already been distributed, with the result that no tickets will be available at the door tonight or through the school.

Ann Landers

Groom' parents step out of line

Dear Ann Landers: Our problem is one that has been causing a lot of anxiety in our family. We need an outside opinion from someone who is not a Baptist. You have been selected.

Our son is planning to be married on August 9. The trouble is over the reception. His fiancée's parents are very strict Baptists. They do not drink any kind of liquor. Even spiked punch is out. The wedding will be held in the church and the reception which follows will take place in the church parlor.

Since my husband and I wish to respect their wishes we went ahead and made reservations at our country club for a second reception — following theirs. A bar will be set up and liquor will be served. We have engaged an orchestra for dancing.

When we told our son of our plans he was furious. He informed us that he and his bride would not attend the reception, that it would be considered a slap in the face to his future in-laws and their relatives.

How can we make him see how selfish his attitude is? Our friends and family will have a very dull evening unless my husband and I entertain them in the manner to which they are accustomed.

Will you please come to the rescue, Ann? — Want To Do It Right

Dear Want To: Sorry, you rattled the wrong cage. You are dead wrong.

The parents of the bride are putting on the wedding and reception. You and your relatives and friends should go along with whatever they have planned. If you can't get through the night without booze, then get plastered by yourself, after you get home.

Should you care to have a reception when the couple returns from their honeymoon, it would be perfectly proper to do so. You could then serve kerosene and battery acid if you wanted to since it would be your party. But you would, I hope, have non-alcoholic beverages on hand for the bride's side — if they wish to attend.

Dear Ann Landers: We moved into a new apartment a few weeks ago. Last night the women across the hall gave a "housewarming" party for us which we thought was most generous considering that these days most people don't want to have anything to do with their neighbors. There were about 28 people present. Each guest brought something for the 8 o'clock supper. The party was, of course, in our apartment.

All our furniture is new. Even though we are not completely furnished, what we have is of good quality. About 7:30, when I was in the kitchen making coffee, I heard a crash. I rushed to the living room and saw two men helping a woman up from the floor. She was not injured, thank the Lord, but our lovely antique English chair was in splinters. Why on earth would a person who weighs at least 250 pounds select THAT chair to sit on?

Someone made a feeble joke about suing us, but not one word was mentioned about replacing the chair. Do you feel the woman who broke it is responsible? Your opinion is needed. — Goodbye George III

Dear George: Forget it. You're lucky the woman didn't break her back. People assume that chairs are to sit on. Anything as fragile as your "lovely antique" should be put in a bedroom or a closet when you entertain.

Former newsman plays roles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Having scooped himself out of a job as a newspaperman, Austin Clarke became a college professor and then shed that role to write novels, to broadcast and to practice diplomacy.

Clarke, now cultural attache at the embassy of Barbados here, says that after studying economics and political science at the University of Toronto, he decided he wanted to be an actor but got sidetracked into newspapering.

He worked successfully for two Thomsons Newspapers, Ltd., papers in Ontario — the Timmons Press and the Kirkland Lake Daily News, with respective current circulations of 11,257 and 5,813.

While working in Kirkland

Lake, he was also a parttime correspondent for the Globe & Mail and three other newspapers in Toronto. While covering a murder story, he recalled in an interview, he scooped his own afternoon newspaper by filing first to the morning Globe & Mail, and later to the other Toronto papers.

This understandably annoyed the Kirkland Lake Daily News but led to a job offer with the Globe & Mail. After working for a paper with two reporters, where he sometimes wrote the whole newspaper if his colleague had a hangover, he found it strange being assigned one story a day, he said.

That didn't work out "and they fired me," he said.

Along about the same time,

Clarke decided not to work steadily again until he found out if he could get rid of the urge to write. He took a year off, and soon wrote two novels which were published in 1964 and 1965.

He had also made academic contacts, and was invited to teach Afro-American literature and creative literature at Yale in 1967 and again in 1968-71. Later he taught at Brandeis, Williams, Duke and the University of Texas.

Since then, he says, he has resisted offers to teach.

Clarke, 40, recently published his fifth novel, "The Bigger Light," third in a trilogy about Barbadians living in Toronto.

His job with the Canadian Broadcasting Company and his income from writing have made him independent, he says, but when Prime Minister Errol W. Barrow of Barbados, a lifelong friend, asked him to join the diplomatic corps about a year ago, he agreed to do so.

He now works and lives at the embassy in Washington, but his work frequently takes him back to Canada. His family remains in Toronto: his wife and three children — Janice, 16, Loretta, 14, and Mphahlele, 7, named after a favorite South African poet and playwright, Ezekiel Mphahlele.

"I intend to stay with the government as long as the government thinks I have something to contribute," he said. "I find it very satisfying."

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — How does one remove brown stains from that popular white porcelain-like cookware? My teapot is badly discolored and scouring pads and abrasive cleaners do not help.

My husband fastens narrow strips of self-adhesive foam weather stripping to his trouser hangers because the grooves in the hangers are not enough to hold his slacks. — MRS. L.R.H.

DEAR MRS. L.R.H. — I have an electric coffee pot made of the same porcelain-like cookware. When the inside becomes stained I fill it with very hot water, add a teaspoon or so of automatic dishwasher detergent, let it stand for about 15 minutes and then scrub the inside with the long-handled brush I use to remove food from dishes to go in the dishwasher. This cleans the brush and the inside of the pot is gleaming white. Rinse thoroughly with very hot water. — POLLY.

State tax investigation returns funds

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A special investigative unit of the state Revenue Department has returned more than $1 million in sales taxes to the state during its initial 18 months of work, according to department officials.

But the impact of that team in curbing sales tax evasion could be severely reduced if a proposed $400,000 budget cut that will eliminate seven of the 13 investigators is not restored by the state Senate, says Barbara Scobee, assistant director of the Division of Taxation and Collection.

"What it means is that we'll be doing less cases," Mrs. Scobee said. "You can't do as much. You can't prepare as many cases with six people as you can with 13 or 24."

The special unit, headed by former U.S. Internal Revenue Service agent Henry Rathert, was formed in September 1973 shortly after Revenue Chief James Spradling reported that more than $100 million in sales tax had gone uncollected in recent years, mainly due to evasion.

Since then, that special investigating bureau has prepared 34 criminal fraud cases involving sales tax, obtained the first fraud conviction last year since the sales tax was enacted in 1947 and has gotten 20 other convictions to date. Twelve criminal cases are still pending and one was dismissed.

Earlier this week, members of the unit assisted FBI agents in a Kansas City raid on an illegal cigarette sales ring, that officials estimated had been costing the state and local governments in that area $800,000 a year in lost taxes.

The special unit began with six investigators and last summer transferred in another seven. The department had requested another 10 investigators for the year beginning in July.

But the House Appropriations Committee cut the unit back to the personnel it was originally authorized, primarily because the transfer of the additional people last year was never approved by the legislature and because department officials didn't offer any evidence to show the team was operating at a level that would justify retention of added personnel.

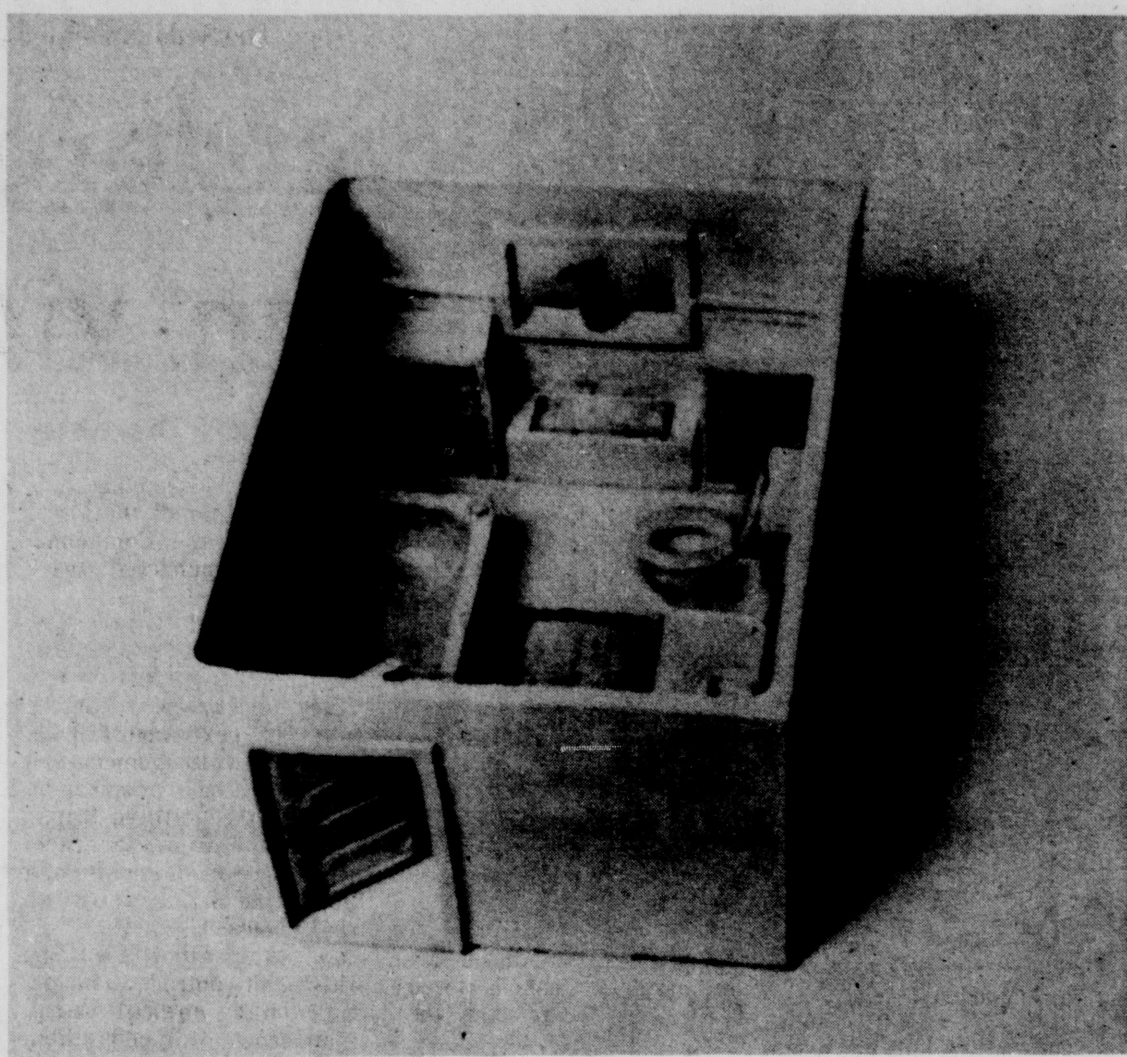

"They said it, but they didn't produce any facts or figures to prove it," said Rep. Gladys Marriot, D-Kansas City, who headed the subcommittee that reviewed the Revenue Department budget request.

"We tried to act responsibly," she added, saying that if the department could prove the need for the additional investigators she would support the extra appropriation.

Sales tax collections for the last fiscal year rose more than 13 per cent, and officials claim the existence of the team played a significant role.

Mrs. Scobee noted that in addition to actual cases developed by the team, its existence has also had the effect of convincing some people who may have considered evading sales tax payments that they would be caught.

"Our collections have increased, but how much of that we can allocate to our special investigators would be anybody's guess," she said. "But we do feel there is a definite increase because of our special investigation bureau cases."

Farm roundup

Weather dictates prices

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail food prices may start declining later this year if farmers get the right amount of sunshine and rain at the proper times, says the Agriculture Department.

But if the corn isn't planted on time and there is another drought this summer, look out. In that case, 1975 food prices will not only go up sharply but will probably take off on another space trip next year.

"As the year progresses, food prices will become more dependent upon 1975 crop conditions both in this country and abroad," the department said Thursday. "Developments relating to general economic conditions, domestic and worldwide, can also be expected to impact on food prices."

A bumper crop, along with wheat and other grains, would translate into lower feed prices for those who produce the meat, poultry and dairy products which make up so much of family food budgets.

In that case, the department said, consumers might see retail food prices rise 6 to 8 per cent over the entire year, compared with a 14.5 per cent jump in 1973 and again in 1974.

But if farmers' crops are whittled by poor weather as they were last year, then the Agriculture Department says food prices will go up 8 to 10 per cent. Even so, those increases would be the smallest since 1972 when there was a 4.3 per cent rise.

Moreover, the department's Outlook and Situation Board said, if farmers have short harvests there would be "a strong likelihood of further sharp increases" in 1976 retail food prices.

The Agriculture Department

ment's analysis followed an announcement by the Labor Department that wholesale prices in April rose 1.5 per cent, reversing a four-month decline. Sharply higher farm prices accounted for most of the increase.

Agriculture economists said the increase was expected since livestock prices, led by cattle, have gone up appreciably in recent weeks. Thus, higher meat prices are expected to account for much of the retail food price increase this spring, the Agriculture Department report said.

"Favorable weather with prospects for large crop harvests may result in a moderate rise in average food prices this summer," the report said. "Increases may be largely associated with animal-related foods as pork and poultry output remain well below a year earlier."

At the same time, the report said, good weather would allow cattlemen to hold animals on grass longer and perhaps place them in feedlots for slaughter later this year.

Conversely, poor weather and short crops would drive up feed costs again and force another rush of cattle onto the market as producers trim herds to save expenses. That would mean a temporary benefit to consumer meat buyers, but would cause tight supplies and higher prices later on.

Head of largest brewery hands leadership to son

ST. LOUIS (AP) — August A. Busch Jr., longtime chief executive of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., the world's biggest brewer, has announced that he has turned active direction of the firm over to his son, August A. Busch III.

The elder Busch, 76, who held the top spot for 28 years, said Thursday that he planned to remain as chairman of the board. Busch's son has been president of the company since February 1974.

Since Busch took over the reins of the brewing company in 1947, annual sales have increased from $75 million to $1.4 billion and earnings have risen from $8.5 million to $64 million.

Marshal charged with selling guns

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Gary Johnson, 32, Plattsburg, Mo., city marshal was charged in a federal grand jury indictment Thursday with violating the federal Gun Control Act by selling machine guns and silencers.

Johnson was charged with conspiring to possess and transfer firearms between Feb. 1 and May 6, 1975. A co-defendant in the indictment is Cleo Burgard of Garden City, Mo.

The two men were arrested in Kansas City Tuesday by agents of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division of the Treasury Department.

Business mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are paying off their debts by the hundreds of millions of dollars and, to the chagrin of merchants and some government economists, they don't seem to be developing a buyer's mood at all.

It will come, we are told by the high-finance forecasters. The First National City Bank said this week that "as inflation moderates and monetary policy continues to be stimulative, tightened purse strings should begin to loosen."

True, but the loosening foreseen by the bank isn't coming until "later this year." And a publication of Chase Manhattan Bank headlines, "Housing industry poised for an upturn," but adds the tail, "late this year."

Meanwhile, people are paying off those bills and avoiding new ones, hurting car dealers in particular. Barely was the rebate program on car sales over when the manufacturers realized they must begin again.

For the fourth month in five, consumers lowered their debt in March and indications are that the trend continued through April. The March reduction totaled $462 million, the third highest figure on record.

In the full January-March quarter the consumer debt declined $816 million, and this followed a reduction of $909 million in the final three months of 1974. But that left $184.25 billion in borrowings on the books.

While that figure appears to be enormous it represents an increase of only $6.68 billion from a year earlier. Wring out inflation from those swollen figures and you have a real decline of at least that much.

All this suggests that American consumers, disheveled by inflation, are getting their houses in order, both reacting to and, by their reluctance to spend, reinforcing the recession.

If you're a pessimist you would be inclined to say they have every reason to remain conservative, cautious, without confidence. But if you're an optimist you'll view this as the stage setting for economic expansion.

A good many financial men see the brighter view, although they tend to look through binoculars rather than reading glasses. Over the next couple of months nobody seems to foresee any sudden turn for the better, but by year end they insist the change will be apparent.

The consumer isn't dead, despite the claims made by automobile dealers who say he hasn't been seen in his usual haunts for months. He's alive and alert, but suspicious. He's timing his move.

Senate leader opposes compromise funding plan

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Senate Appropriations Chairman Norman Merrell has splashed cold water on a house offer to compromise the $35 million emergency funding bill.

Merrell said the offer to reduce spending on several House-backed programs was still unacceptable.

A House-Senate conference committee on the bill has broken up in a deadlock after senators walked out of a meeting April 28. Most of the emergency funds are to keep state agencies operating until the next budget year begins July 1.

"Let the state agencies live within their budget," Merrell said. "That's what they pay agency heads $30,000 for."

He has said that the bill could die because of the deadlock between the two houses.

Merrell said one agency, the Mental Health Department, which requested emergency money to pay salaries to 1,700 employees, suddenly has found the funds. "The worms are starting to come out of the woodwork," he said.

The House's offer to reduce a $1.5 million storm sewer project in St. Louis County to $1 million was unacceptable, Merrell said. "That's not an emergency."

The House also reduced to $60,000 the original $278,000 proposal for a mobile cancer detection program. Merrell said there should be no new programs because of the tight economic situation.

The House lowered its $500,000 request to buy land for two new prisons near Kansas City and St. Louis to $50,000 for selection of the sites. Merrell said he had no "hang-up" on that, but preferred the Senate's $15,000 request.

The Monticello Democrat also raised the specter that a special legislative session may have to be called because the House adopted regular appropriations bill six weeks later than normal.

The session would have to be

On the hustle

Minnesota Fats, the king of pool hustlers, seemed a bit surprised at the quality of play by the inmates of the Menard Correctional Center at Chester, Ill., in the left photo. In the center photo he describes games of the pool players he has known. In the right photo he laughs as he is beaten again by one of the inmates in exhibition play.

Fats at prison

Inmates beat famous pool hustler

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Writer
MENARD, Ill. (AP) — Nearly everyone in the joint beat Minnesota Fats. Those were the breaks for the World's Greatest Pool Player, as he styles himself, at a prison exhibition.

Fats, perhaps the most famous hustler in the history of the game, was giving an exhibition and the joint was the Menard Correctional Center.

"I've been everywhere on earth and played every champion since I was 12 years old and never lost a match," Fats said Wednesday as inmate Bob Kinzinger racked up some balls.

"I hustled pool since I was two years old — born and raised in a saloon," Fats added as Kinzinger broke the rack for a game of eight ball. He scratched.

"That was your first mistake right there," an onlooker joked. But Fats scratched too, leaving Kinzinger a perfect setup. He lined it up carefully, turned to Fats and said, "I'm not going to give you the break you gave me."

Ten minutes later, Kinzinger racked his cue with a victory over the World's Greatest to tell the boys back in the cell block about.

When inmate William Youngblood, 23, took on Fats, it was a youthful dream come true. He has boyhood memories of the night Fats came to Detroit to shoot a high stakes game.

"Everybody — pimps and players, dames and gamblers — came down that night," Youngblood said. "I was watching them bet $100 a ball. And that was just fellows betting on the side. Ever since I saw him, he's been my idol for a hustler."

Youngblood won when Fats ignored a sure shot on the eight ball and fired a three-rail bank and missed.

"Everybody plays too good around here," Fats said as Youngblood tapped it in. A score or so other prison players polished Fats off as well.

Born Rudolph Wanderone 62 years ago in New York City, Fats wasn't exactly throwing the games but he did say, "People get a kick out of it when they beat me. I've gone for a day and never won a game. In eight ball, any living creature can beat you any game."

Fats, who lives in Dowell, Ill., takes hustling seriously. The only time I ever play for fun is in exhibitions," he said.

And then, he doesn't like any nonsense such as having to wear a tuxedo as some who would like to upgrade the game's image ask.

"That's like putting whipped cream on a hot dog," Fats said.

"I got my name because I broke everybody in Minnesota when I was 12 years old," Fats said.

"What's the most you've ever played for?" an inmate asked. "I played once for $250,000," Fats said.

"Who won?" another prisoner inquired.

"I never lost a match in my life," said Minnesota Fats.

Girl tells of tent life

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — We talk.

Sometimes my mother and father cry. We talk in the middle of the night when we wake up because we're too cold to sleep. Breezes come down those hills. Not warm like in a town.

We talk in the line at the mess hall. One and a half hours wait. Some say they wish they were in a restaurant in Saigon. We laugh a lot then.

We talk about the relatives we left behind. About our families. We ask strangers if they heard of our relatives. Vietnamese families are very close.

I lived with my parents, sister and husband and five children, and sister-in-law and her husband and their children in four houses all together and a coffee shop.

We bought the coffee shop for my brother and sister-in-law just after Tet, for when he gets out of the army. We all pitched in our money and now it's gone.

He's still in the army and we worry. We wonder what's going on in Saigon. We talk about going back. But we can not as long as it is communist.

We talk about sponsors. The people who don't have sponsors say, "They can't just let us sit here. Maybe we will form a colony like Chinatown."

I think from what I hear, it is reasonable that they think that way. But the Americans say don't worry, plenty of sponsors.

Taking of Ticonderoga key to American victory

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

Two hundred years ago, a hotheaded land speculator and an egotistical military captain led a pack of mountaineers on a decaying British fort.

As a military victory, it amounted to little. No shots were fired. Eighty high spirited locals, led by Ethan Allen, swarmed over a forgotten bastion in the wilds of upper New York on May 10, 1775. They outnumbered the fort's British soldiers, who were asleep when the nighttime attack started.

But the message swept down the coast: the rebels had captured Ft. Ticonderoga. And for the English subjects of the colonies, loyal to their king but fed up with his Parliament, the coup lifted spirits.

It was the first offensive action by the Americans in the Revolutionary War.

During the next three years of fighting, the prize won by Allen and his Green Mountain Boys proved its importance. Artillery from the fort helped drive the British from Boston. It was the base camp for an ill-fated attack on Canada. Its strategic position on Lake Champlain stopped a British advance on the populated areas of the seacoast.

The fortress, now restored, hunches on a hill overlooking the narrows at the southern end of the big lake. From there, it commanded the greatest inland waterway of the Northeast, and that was its importance.

In colonial times, when roads barely existed, water was the fastest way to travel. And the most direct water route between the mid-Atlantic colonies and Canada was along the Hudson River to Lake George, then past Ft. Ticonderoga onto Lake Champlain, the Richelieu River and the St. Lawrence.

The waterway was first fought over by the French and British during the French and Indian Wars. To defend their claim, the French built Ft. Carillon in 1755, but the British captured it and gave it a version of the area's Indian name, Ticonderoga.

There the British stayed, but with Canada secure, only a skeleton force manned the fort.

Little changed until April 19, 1775, when colonial Minutemen resisted the Redcoats at Lexington and Concord. As the alarm spread, colonial militia units, upset over the mother country's economic policies, marched toward Boston.

A group from New Haven, Conn., led by Benedict Arnold, who later became traitor, joined the American cause. Arnold told the Massachusetts Provincial Congress of the cannons and other weapons stored at Ft. Ticonderoga, and the Congress gave him 100 pounds to raise a force and take the fort.

About the same time, another small expedition, also alerted by Arnold, left Connecticut, and they all met in Bennington, now part of Vermont, where Ethan Allen had called together his Green Mountain Boys.

Allen, a bold impulsive land speculator from Connecticut, had organized the mountain settlers to defend themselves against the conflicting claims of New York and New Hampshire for their land.

With Arnold and the Connecticut men at his side, Allen led his unruly followers in scows across Lake Champlain on the night of May 9, 1775.

At the break of dawn, 80 men, three abreast, marched up to the fort, and a sentry ran for safety. As they swarmed in, about 40 British soldiers, half of them too old or unhealthy to fight, slept in their barracks.

When Capt. William Delaplace, the commander of the post, confronted the rebels, he asked them under what authority they were acting.

"In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," thundered back Allen.

The revolutionaries now controlled the vital point on the thoroughfare to Canada.

They quickly took advantage of it. The next August, Brig. Gen. Richard Montgomery used the fort as a base to launch an attack on the northern British possessions. Meanwhile, Arnold led another expedition overland through the Maine wilderness toward Quebec.

But the expedition failed. The British still controlled Canada, and that meant only Ticonderoga stopped them from capturing the waterway that was a main thoroughfare between New England and the colonies to the south.

Meanwhile, Ticonderoga's big guns were needed for the first target of George Washington's army — British-held Boston. During the winter, Gen. Henry Knox and his men dragged 60 tons of cannon, mortars and howitzers across the rough terrain of western Massachusetts. On March 5, 1776, the Continental Army set the guns up on the highlands around Boston, and the British left without a fight.

That summer, the British army massed in Canada, ready to sail down the Champlain Valley to attack the colonies. But Ticonderoga and its troops blocked the way.

All summer, both sides built navies on Lake Champlain. They met in combat on Oct. 11, 1776, and the British decimated the colonial ships commanded by Arnold.

By this time, winter was approaching, and the British had to postpone their big move until the next July.

Then, the British forced the rebels to give up the fort when they surprised them with fortifications on a nearby mountaintop.

As the British moved on, their expedition bogged down a few miles to the south, and they were beaten in the Battle of Saratoga, the turning point of the Revolutionary War.

What's so surprising in U.S. bigotry?

WASHINGTON — So President Ford is shocked by the hostility some Americans are directing at the Vietnamese refugees. "It is not the America I know," the President said.

Rowan

There are Americans declaring angrily: "I don't want one of 'em moving next door to me!"

Mr. Ford surely is familiar with that America, for racial bigotry in housing is as old as the country itself, and once got its greatest impetus from the federal government.

Perhaps the President is surprised by the incongruity of Americans saying, in effect, "We'll send over 56,000 of our boys to die for you, but we don't want you in our neighborhoods."

Or could the President be more surprised at this ugly unveiling of the hypocrisy that for 20 years we fought, bled, died and drained resources to "preserve liberty" for 19 million Vietnamese — and that Americans are now saying that Vietnam was always just a "forward defense perimeter"? Perhaps that Iowa mother summed up our motives when she said her son died to "keep the Communists from coming over here."

And who can be surprised that a Vietnamese woman should sit on a cot in a Florida refugee compound weeping because the Danville, Va., man she married when he was in Vietnam now rejects her, and his family has told her to stay away.

That may not be the America President Ford knows, but many thousands of Americans who have entered mixed marriages know this kind of rejection is vintage Americanism.

The racist aspects of hostility to the Vietnamese harken back to cries of "yellow peril" and to the McCarran Act and other immigration laws that codified prejudices against Asian newcomers.

The economic aspects of the anti-Vietnamese uproar are not new either.

Blacks in Miami and many other cities have seen thousands of jobs they used to hold go to Cuban refugees, and they have had plenty of experience complaining about it. With one black out of every eight job-seekers unable to find work, many will see the Vietnamese refugee influx as a new threat.

And who hasn't heard the clamor of jobless Americans, demanding that someone throw out all those "Mexican wetbacks" and illegal aliens from other countries?

There is even a movement to cut off all legal immigration until there is work for people already here.

So President Ford may not know it, but there is an America that knows greed even in boom times, and becomes dog-eat-dog when times are hard. That is when union seniority is revered above any "fair employment" scheme to give jobs to minorities, women or anyone else who may have been cheated in past years.

"I've got mine; let the other jokers get theirs where they can," becomes the rule of life.

So, with times now as hard as they have been for more than three decades for millions of Americans, who can be surprised that a furor arises when 150,000 refugees are suddenly on the national doorstep with the President asking for half a billion dollars to resettle them?

The hostility becomes acute because it is easy for millions of Americans to hide racism and greed behind justifiable resentment that among the genuine refugees are thousands of high-level crooks, pimps, prostitutes, political oppressors and more than a few killers.

Many a decent, worthy Vietnamese will suffer and face unnecessary hostility because our government has not tried, either before, during or after our panicky, harum-scarum evacuation, to separate out the thieves and torturers from those refugees who are truly worthy of a nation's compassion.

Whatever the case, no one ought to be surprised by outbursts of racism, selfishness and cruelty, for those are a part of the America we all know.

These ugly qualities of our national life can be muted, however, by wise, courageous, compassionate leadership. Not just the refugees, but all of us, will be beneficiaries if President Ford sees that once again the weight of the White House is thrown against bigotry in all its forms.

On the freebie circuit

By DOUG KNEIBERT

I gently chided my colleagues in the weekly press a few years ago for indulging so copiously in "freebies" from various private organizations.

Well, they're back at it.

Freebies are free gifts and favors given to members of the press, usually for purposes other than because newspapermen are such wonderful fellows.

For example, if a reporter or editor took a free trip to Hawaii courtesy of the Amalgamated Strip Miners Inc., chances are that the ASM might expect a little goodwill — and favorable treatment — in return.

Some people in journalism are vulnerable to these kinds of not-so-subtle blandishments, and it has become a matter of concern to those in the profession who think the public often turns out to be the loser in such tradeoffs.

The Ozark Press Association is spending this weekend at Branson for its annual meeting. The "sponsors" of the social side of things are a collection of electric coop's, with the U.S. Brewers Association weighing in with some free suds.

But the real bash comes next month, when the Central Missouri Press Association will get together at Tan-Tar-A. Here's a brief rundown of the freebie bill-of-fare:

Four hours of booze and beer, courtesy of the Missouri Oil Council and the U.S. Brewers; a buffet, compliments of the Missouri Farmer's Association and the Central Electric Power Coop, with the generous Brewers coming back that night to co-host a boat ride on the lake.

Next morning the Gas Service Co. will set up a coffee bar and an insurance company will spring for the ladies luncheon. Wine and cheese will be served that evening courtesy of the Mid-State Electric Coop.

Oh yes, that morning the editors will discuss the campaign disclosure law, which is mainly concerned — you guessed it — with conflict of interest.

With time running out for what remains of the George R. Smith home — the first house built in Sedalia — at the very least the city should try to salvage part of a log beam or so to keep around as a memento.

The house in question, at Mill and Saline, is due to be demolished by the owner after being declared a public nuisance by the city. Although it has seen numerous additions and modifications over the years, the house does contain some of the original timber, including unbarked floor beams and square, hand-made nails.

The house is too far gone — and too much changed — to be restored. But something tangible could be salvaged before it's too late.

Medical convenience

The cranberry is a native North American fruit. Long before the Pilgrims arrived in 1620, the Indians combined crushed cranberries with dried deer meat and melted fat to make pemmican — a convenience food that would keep for a long time. The Indians attributed the cranberry with medicinal properties; medicine men brewed cranberry poultices to draw poison from arrow wounds.

"I DO BELIEVE I'VE BOTTOMED OUT."

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Our columns about the private world of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis produced a Vesuvius of angry denials and denunciations.

Individual answers to all the letters are impossible, so we will attempt an omnibus reply. We will offer, too, a few details that were crowded out of the original series.

An enormous investment of national interest, respect, affection and prestige was once made in Jacqueline Kennedy. She was a factor in the imagery surrounding John F. Kennedy's rise to the presidency and in the glittering aura cast by his administration.

As First Lady, she occupied the position of a national exemplar. There is, therefore, a continuing interest in her that does not cease at a convenient moment, an interest in the key events of her life, in how she conducts herself.

There is an historical interest, too, in what kind of person she was at the time when she was a symbol of America, the cynosure of all eyes. Historians are still probing and analyzing the behavior of Mary Todd Lincoln and Eleanor Roosevelt before, during and after their White House years. So it must continue to be with Jacqueline Kennedy.

For still other reasons she is a particular lightning rod for public attention. Her choice of lifestyle, which by ordinary standards is exotic, attracts the spotlight.

The Jacqueline Kennedy who in the years of Camelot and the days of Dallas won a place in the nation's heart and imagination left the White House with a prestige that could have been a tremendous force for good.

When fate bestows a staggering opportunity to serve mankind, it also inflicts a responsibility that supersedes private inclinations. Eleanor Roosevelt took up that burden; Coretta King has taken it up. Jacqueline Kennedy has shirked it, pursuing instead luxury, languor, gowns, jewels and the wheedling of unearned wealth.

Her reign as queen of the jet set has been chronicled largely by the gossip writers who report the bon mots, the pouts and the whims of the social butterflies. Our columns, on the contrary, were not based at all upon gossip dropped at posh parties.

Merry-go-round

Jackie's potential devoted to luxury

The late Aristotle Onassis himself piqued our interest by inviting us to his favorite Manhattan restaurant last December for a private talk. It turned out to be his last conversation with a newsman.

He had little to say about his famous wife except for a mild complaint about her extravagance and her horsey friends. But we learned afterwards that he had indicated to his closest associates that we could be trusted. This led some of them to confide in us after his death.

We were also shown private papers, letters and other documents. We spent three weeks pursuing every lead and checking out every detail. For Jackie's side of the story, we spoke to several of her friends, and we offered to go over every allegation with her personally.

We reported thereafter that the huge Onassis estate will be controlled by daughter Christina, not wife Jacqueline, and that the marriage had been preceded by a written contract providing a cash settlement on Jacqueline of at least $3 million in tax-free bonds.

She also received a spending allowance, which began at $30,000 a month but was cut to $20,000 by Onassis in protest over her spending habits. She had other perquisites such as charge privileges in the famous shopping emporiums of the world.

We reported further that Jacqueline systematically converted gowns, gifts and other indulgences of Onassis into cash by selling them off at fashionable New York City resale houses.

As signs accumulated that the largesse was ending, Jackie reacted by intensifying her efforts. During her husband's final illness, she went on a shopping spree at Bloomingdale's.

A close friend of the Onassis told us: "She thought it might be her last fling. She is so avaricious, so greedy." But her secretary, Nancy Tuckerman, claimed Jackie had to buy many items for her new home in New Jersey. "Life must go on," said Ms. Tuckerman.

Not long after the Onassis funeral, the indispensable Ms. Tuckerman was dispatched to the New York headquarters to inquire about the continuation of the allowance. Christina apparently is letting it continue.

If Jackie squandered her late husband's money, she was always tight with her own. She had to pay out of her own budget, for example, to repaint her Fifth Avenue apartment. Once, she called in a representative of the Union Square Painting Company and asked for estimates. When she found it would cost $3,000 for the paint work, she cancelled the project rather than spend the money.

She was lavish, however, with the money not only of her husband but of her friends. During a fabulous few days in Tehran as guest of Iran's top oilman, Dr. Rexa Fallah, Jacqueline spent most of her time in the shops buying up expensive jewelry, antiques, artwork, sheepskin boots and jackets, silk ties, lamps and other loot.

We have evidence that she charged everything to her host. Then afterwards, she announced that she was leaving a $700 check to be distributed among the servants. But no check was ever found.

Time to recall our beginnings

Re: "The refugee debate dishonors America" (editorial).

I have heard so much utter hogwash about the Vietnam refugees that ... I offer one solid hearty hand shake to any and all who recognize these words and can tell me where they are inscribed:

"Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free."

"The wretched refuse of your teeming shore."

Since when have we grown so high and mightily that we forget our own beginning? We seem to have a wonderful attitude for our 200th birthday anniversary!

Maddox's hitting helps drop Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP)—I feel good, but I still don't have the confidence I want," tall Garry Maddox maintained.

The doubts of Maddox notwithstanding, however, the Philadelphia Phillies feel they've struck it rich with their new acquisition in center field.

A tip from his former manager helped Thursday as Maddox snapped a hitting slump with two doubles and a triple in a 6-2 Phils victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

And the performance of the swift outfielder, who was obtained on Sunday from the San Francisco Giants in a trade, further buoyed the optimism of Manager Danny Ozark.

"It looks now like Maddox will definitely hit third," said Ozark, whose club is awaiting the arrival of Dick Allen as an even newer member of its cast.

"And if what he did today is any indication, we'll have no problems keeping him there," Ozark predicted.

"I told the guys in spring training that if they'd give me 75 to 100 times at bat I'd have straightened myself out," remarked Maddox, who hit a tepid 135 in 18 games as a member of the Giants.

"I played the first two games with them, then I got benched," he recalled. "Then (Von) Joshua was sick, so I played some more but not enough. They wanted to platoon the two of us."

Maddox' emergence from his hitting slump coincided with words of advice from Giants scout Charlie Fox, who viewed the Phils-Cards series from the pressbox.

"He was looking for me at breakfast at the hotel," explained Maddox, whose first two seasons at San Francisco were under Fox' field directions.

"He even told (Larry) Bowa to look for me and tell what I was doing wrong," Maddox added, "but he found me himself and told me I was squatt-

Islanders alive and well

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Maybe it's corny, but there isn't any better way to put it — the New York Islanders just don't know when they're licked. They're like a cat with nine lives.

Coach Al Arbour's Islanders dropped the first three games in the National Hockey League Stanley Cup semifinal playoffs to the proud defending champion Philadelphia Flyers. They were given up for dead.

Sure, the Islanders fell behind 3-0 in the best-of-seven quarter-final series with the Pittsburgh Penguins. Sure, they came back to win 4-3, the second team in sports history to overcome a three-game deficit in a seven game series. But repeat that trick against the best team in hockey—the Flyers? That's a laugh.

Stop laughing friend. The Islanders are a pretty live corpse. They trampled the Flyers 5-1 Thursday night on the champ's home ice, before 17,077 frantic fans. That, with their 5-4 overtime victory at home Wednesday and presto, the Islanders are back in the series. It's 3-2 now, and the next game is on Islanders' ice.

The Islanders did in the Flyers in the fifth game behind the outstanding goaltending of 26-year-old Glenn Resch, who stopped 28 of 29 shots, some that befitted hockey's team of miracle workers.

In that second period, the fired up Flyers got off 17 shots on goal and came up empty handed. The Islanders had six and scored twice.

Former Olympic leader Avery Brundage is dead

GARMISCH - PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany (AP) — "Sports is a pastime and a diversion," Avery Brundage once said. "The minute it becomes more than that, it's business or work."

With that credo Brundage battled commercialism and politics in sports, especially international competition, for a half century—climaxed by 20 years' service as president of the International Olympic Committee.

With the fervor of an old-time revivalist at a tent meeting, Brundage battled play-for-pay professionalism to protect his brand of amateurism from a materialistic world. His crusade often earned for him the image of a grumpy scold, often tactless and un diplomatic.

He ended two decades as IOC president at Munich's 1972 Summer Olympics, games scarred by a bloodbath—the death of 11 Israeli athletes following an attack by a Palestinian terror group.

With one final fervent cry against commercialism, particularly the Winter Olympics and Alpine skiing, Brundage stepped down and Ireland's Lord Killanin took over the leadership of the Olympics. Brundage was named the IOC's honorary president.

Wary and lonely following the death in 1971 of his first wife, the Detroit-born Brundage retired, admitting that years of controversy over such things as communism, racism, nationalism and, above all, commercialism, had taken its toll.

He gave away his collection of Oriental jade and other objects d'art valued in the millions

Come from behind win Rangers down Royals

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Willie Davis loves Billy Martin.

Davis, the Texas center fielder, said so Thursday night after he whacked a home run and three singles in the Rangers' uphull 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Davis said his performance was not motivated by anything Martin, the Rangers' fiery manager, said to him or anybody else during a closed-door club meeting Wednesday night following Texas' second straight licking by the Royals.

"Last night is gone and past," Davis said. "When you have a championship-caliber team, out of the arguments comes the best understanding. Arguments clear the air."

"I'm motivated all the time. I plan the next day in advance. I started planning tonight's game last night... very definitely. If it comes off, I'm happy. If it doesn't come off, I'm happy. I'm always happy."

"Billy Martin? I love Billy. We're great friends. We've known each other for many years. We've parted together. You can't throw all that away over a few words."

"And... the Rangers are gonna win it all."

Martin confirmed he said nothing to Davis.

"I don't single out players at a meeting," Martin explained. "I had something to say to the players. I've done it before. Willie's playing his heart out."

"We worked so hard on fundamentals in spring training, and fundamentals have been beating us."

Davis, in addition to his four hits, stole two bases, drove in three runs and scored one. His single in the ninth inning off reliever Doug Bird, 2-2, drove in Cesar Tovar with what proved to be the winning run.

Tovar, Lenny Randle and Davis all singled with one out. Jeff Burroughs drilled a double to right-center, scoring Randle. Davis was nailed at the plate.

John Mayberry and Hal McRae hit consecutive doubles off Steve Hargan, 3-1, in the first for Kansas City's first run. Texas got even in the second on a walk to Mike Hargrove. Roy Howell's single and Toby Harrah's run-scoring single.

Tovar made a two-base error in the second, permitting George Brett to reach second base. Fred Patk drove Brett home with a single. Mayberry gave the Royals a 3-1 edge in the sixth, leading off with a home run.

Royals Manager Jack McKeon paid tribute to Davis for his homer.

"When Davis knows they need a home run," McKeon sighed, "he doesn't go up there for a single. He takes his rip."

Bullets need one victory to sieze division crown

BOSTON (AP) — Less than two weeks ago, a couple of members of the Boston Celtics remarked it was "like looking at yourself in a mirror" when they played the Washington Bullets.

They didn't realize it at the time, but so far everything indicates they were thinking of crazy fun-house mirrors.

The Bullets, coached by former Celtic great K.C. Jones, have shown the ability and poise of Boston's great teams of the past. Now they have the mighty defending champion Celtics on the brink of elimination in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Washington, leading 3-1 in the best-of-seven series, seeks to wrap up the Eastern Conference championship and oust Boston tonight at the Garden. A victory will send the Bullets into the title round against the winner of the Golden State-Chicago playoff in the Western Conference, which the Bulls lead 3-2 after an 89-79 victory Thursday night.

Since rallying from a 12-point deficit to win the opening game 100-95, the Bullets have looked the better team, employing old Celtics plays learned by Jones and employing new patterns. Washington won the second game 117-92. Boston took the third 101-90 and the Bullets romped 119-108 Wednesday night in Landover, Md.

The Celtics, who won 60 games during the regular season, blame poor shooting for their failure against the Bullets. But the Washington defense has to be credited for much of Boston's sub-par marksmanship in a bid to foil the Celtics' try for a 13th NBA crown since 1957.

Despite being down 3-1, with the sixth game, if necessary, scheduled for Sunday in Land-

Sabres into NHL finals

MONTREAL (AP) — Coach Scotty Bowman of the Montreal Canadiens quietly peeled a tab off a soft drink can in the Montreal dressing room Thursday night.

A group of reporters had clustered around him to hear his explanation of a 4-3 loss suffered by Montreal to the Buffalo Sabres, which enabled the Sabres to win their best-of-seven National Hockey League semifinal playoff series 4-2.

"I don't know," Bowman said in subdued tones. "We just didn't have it tonight. We just didn't put three good periods together, except for two games in the series."

Buffalo played a very fine second period. That fourth goal (by Jim Lorentz in the second period) gave them a big lift. It was eventually the winning goal.

The Canadiens, who won 7-0 and 8-2 on Forum ice earlier in the series, started off with a furious offensive assault, but only Peter Mahovlich found the range against Buffalo netminder Gerry Desjardins in the opening period.

Meanwhile, Craig Ramsay, Rick Martin and Pete McNab scored for Buffalo in the opening session with Ramsay's goal at 2:07 coming with the Sabres shorthanded. Lorentz got the lone goal of the second period with Guy Lafleur and Mahovlich scoring for Montreal in the third.

"We had some pretty good chances," said Bowman. "Desjardins made some good saves. He was sharp tonight. He played his best game of the series."

"He kept us in there," added Buffalo Coach Floyd Smith. "He came up big for us all year. All season long, he made big saves for us. He made the saves when he had to."

While the Canadiens were strong in the opening session, they faded badly in the second, managing only three shots, two of them with less than 10 seconds to go.

The Sabres now will have at least four days rest while they await their opponent for the final round. The Philadelphia Flyers lead the New York Islanders 3-2 in the other semifinal.

Singh vs. Foolish Pleasure

Preakness field mounts

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

Singh, a 3-year-old colt whose connections are looking ahead to the Preakness, and Ruffian, a 3-year-old filly who has never looked back, headline Saturday's thoroughbred racing.

Singh, unbeaten this year but unraced since April 5, heads a field of five Preakness hopefuls for the 1 1/16-mile, $150,000 Preakness Prep at Pimlico. The Preakness will be held May 17.

Unbeaten Ruffian is the leading probable for the $50,000 added, one-mile Acorn Stakes at Aqueduct, the opening race in the New York Racing Association's Triple Crown for fillies.

A good showing by Singh will send him to the $150,000 added, 1 3/16 mile Preakness where he will meet Kentucky Derby winner Foolish Pleasure. Singh, owned by Cynthia Phipps and Hal Price Headley, opened his 3-year-old campaign by winning the Peter Pan. He then won divisions of the Bay Shore and Gotham but came out of the Gotham with a strained ligament.

The others in the Preakness Prep probably would need a victory to earn a start in the Preakness. They are Con Man, who is co-high weighted at 122 with Singh; North of the Law, 119; El Pitirre, 115; and King of Fools, 112.

Locust Hill Farm's Ruffian, unbeaten in seven starts, two this year, is the overwhelming choice to win the Acorn. She is expected to be opposed by Buckland Farm's Piece of Luck and the Marvin Sachs' entry of Sir Ivor's Sorrow and Somethingreal and possibly Brookmeade Stable's Resident Nurse, winner of four of five starts including the Searching Stakes this year.

There are two $50,000-added stakes on tap Saturday and one of them is at Pimlico—the Dixie Handicap over 1 1/2 miles on the grass. The other is the one-mile, $50,000-added Caballero Handicap at Hollywood Park.

A 16-horse field was entered for the Dixie including four two-horse entries. Top weight of 116 goes to Ecole Etage who will be coupled with the betting with Malaga Bay. Others entered include Outdoors, John Drew and Barcas, 115 each.

Among the top handicap runners in the Caballero are Ancient Time, 126; Big Band, 119; Alhoa Mood, 117; and the mare Susan's Girl, 117.

This is the year of the rabbit.

(Introducing the 38mpg, VW rabbit.)

The Chinese named this the Year of the Rabbit. Their Rabbit will give you a year of prosperity. Our Rabbit will give you 38 mpg† (on the highway). As much legroom and headroom as you get in some of the mid-sized cars. Great carrying capacity, plus the convenience of a Hatchback (and not a penny extra for that hatch). And a price that makes it the car of the year.

Oldsmobile delivers: Good gas mileage in every size car.

Check the test figures published in the EPA 1975 Buyer's Guide: You'll find an Olds delivered top gas mileage in its class more often than any other car—one more good reason to have an Olds around you, whatever size car you buy.

STARFIRE, OMEGA:

Surprising MPG in little cars, too.
Starfire, with its 2-bbl. V6, got 19 mpg in city driving tests, 25 mpg in the highway test. What's more, no V8 compact topped Omega in city driving tests—15 mpg with the available 2-bbl. 260 V8—and its 19 mpg in the highway test was a close second.

OLDS CUTLASS V8s:

Top MPG where it's toughest to get.
City driving—toughest on gas economy—is where Cutlass with available 4-bbl. 350 V8 outclassed all mid-size competitors with V8s. Results? 15 mpg in the city test; 20 mpg in the highway test.

OLDS DELTA 88:

Top MPG in full-size family cars.
EPA Buyer's Guide tests show Delta 88 at 14 mpg/city and 18 mpg/highway with the standard 4-bbl. 350 V8—tops in its class, and as good as some mid-size cars, and even compacts, with V8s.

OLDS NINETY-EIGHT:

Top overall MPG in luxury cars.
Oldsmobile's Ninety-Eight with standard 4-bbl. Rocket 455 V8 achieved 12 mpg in the city test, 16 mpg in the highway test—unsurpassed among America's most luxurious cars.

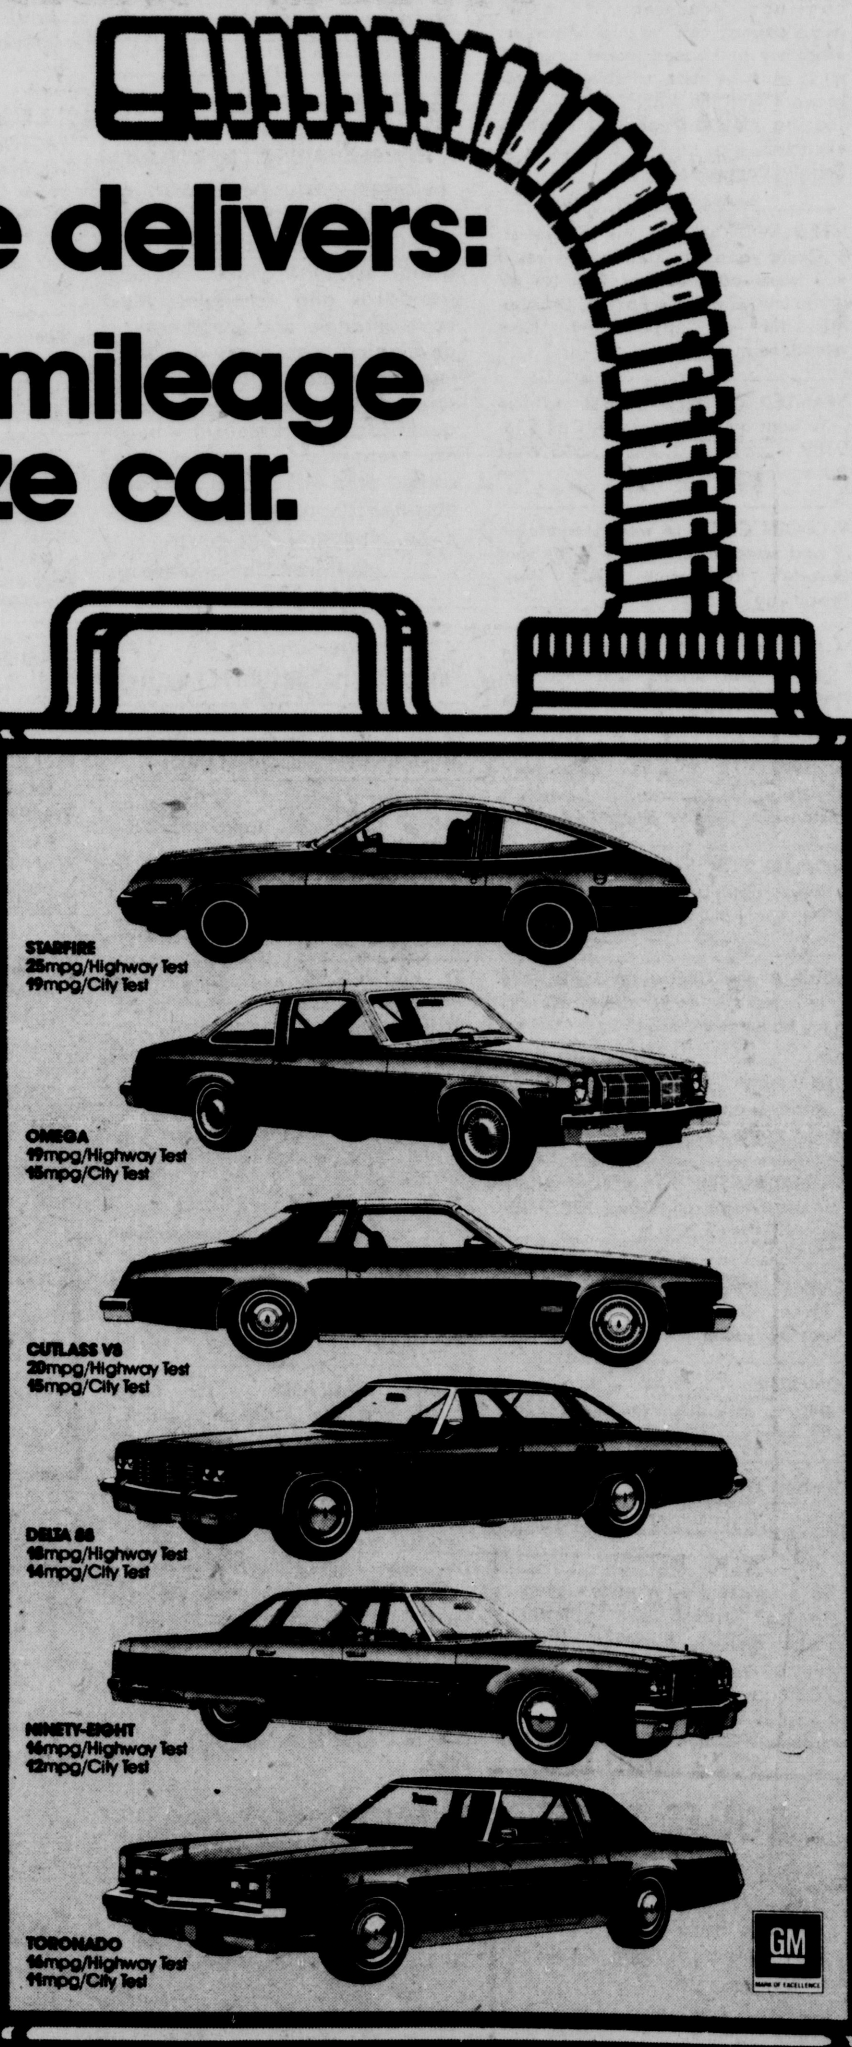

TORONADO:

Nice mileage you wouldn't expect.
No car in its class could beat Toronado's 16 mpg in the highway driving test—and it scored a healthy 11 mpg in the city driving test as well.

P.S. OLDS DEALERS ARE DELIVERING GREAT DEALS, TOO. WHY NOT SEE YOURS TODAY?

Searching for parts is her key answer

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For Ellen Burstyn, success in show business is really deciding — and sticking to it.

"You just can't sit around and wait for opportunity to come along," says the actress who this season has won both a top Hollywood screen Oscar and a Broadway Tony.

Such tandem victory is rare. Accomplished by a performer at age 42, it defies both current youth cultism and the frequently voiced notion that good distaff roles are dwindling.

"I'm making my own," asserts Miss Burstyn of her film jobs. "That's what everyone should do — not sit around and wait for one to come along."

Although fragile in appearance and a specialist in portraying courageous vulnerability, Ellen in conversation manifests total self-reliance.

The shows which landed her at the top — "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" on film and "Same Time, Next Year," which has her playing in person to SRO audiences at the Atkinson Theater — typify career purpose.

"I want to do parts that are good examples of human beings, that I would feel all right about kids going to see. I think it's no accident that there has been so much recent violence on screen and in the world."

As a teen-ager the girl who grew up in Detroit as Edna Rae Gilloly was already beginning to make decisions for herself. Her parents were divorced when she was still a tot. Edna Rae and two brothers stayed with their rewed mother.

In high school she was cheerleader captain, head of the student council, "getting an education of sorts but not what the teachers had in mind." At the end of four years, without enough credits for a diploma, she landed a job as a fashion model in a department store.

"I decided I wanted to see the world, but I thought it would be unpatriotic if I went to Europe before seeing my own country."

With only $50 saved, the future star went to Dallas "for no special reason," and quickly found that was no place to be in steamy August. She was into a third day of not eating before a wholesale clothing exhibit arrived.

More modeling followed at stores in Fort Worth and Houston, after which she headed for New York.

By virtue of some back-home dance lessons, she landed a job in a Manhattan night club — and lost it before the show opened upon discovering that socializing with customers was part of the deal. A friend then found her work dancing in Montreal.

By 19 she was back in Detroit, embarking on the first of three unsuccessful marriages. Reflecting on that part of her life, the actress only says: "I'm not difficult to get along with. I just don't pick them too good, I guess."

A year later she returned to New York, a busy model for magazine illustrations and paperback books. During the '55-'56 television season she was one of Jackie Gleason's "away we go girls, but posing and dancing had begun to pall.

"I made up my mind to be an actress, definitely," says the lady who by then had adopted Ellen McRae as her professional name. (Burstyn came later, the name of her third husband).

She knew nothing of such commercial theater details as auditions and agents, but heard about a show then being cast. With total improbability, she got the main femme part in "Fair Game," a comedy about fur (wheeler-dealers) which ran 242 performances.

After the show closed, she began acting lessons with Stella Adler, the first of many teachers. Miss Burstyn also embarked on her second marriage, with a director who had been fired from "Fair Game."

He was busy in radio and television, so off the couple went to Los Angeles. Between lessons she was

Twofold triumph

It's a great season for Ellen Burstyn, shown here on the set of "Same Time, Next Year," the current Broadway hit. Her starring role in this play is one of her two outstanding achievements — the other being her Oscar-winning role in the film, "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore." She's had a run of successful films, while the Broadway appearance is only her second stage outing. Her play contract runs into October and then she has two film projects planned. (AP) soon occupied in such television durables as "Ma Parkins," "Ben Casey" and "Dr. Kildare," plus some feature films.

"I hated it," she says of the movie "Goodbye Charlie," which led to her next big decision. "There I was co-starring, but just a creation of a lot of studio departments."

The second marriage also had run down, and she departed for New York to start still-continuing tutelage by Lee Strasberg of Actors Studio fame. "From him you don't just learn about acting, you really learn about reality."

Her agent steered her back to the screen, and a new cinematic phase was launched. As Ellen Burstyn she has made seven pictures, among them "The Last Picture Show," "The Exorcist" — for both of which she got Oscar nominations — "Harry and Tonto" with Carney, and the ultimate success, "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore."

Miss Burstyn tried out several times for West Coast theater ventures, and had an occasional bid from Broadway. When the script for "Same Time, Next Year" arrived, she decided that the time had come for another stage outing.

In "Same Time" she enacts a married woman who goes on an annual outing with an extracurricular lover. The blithe comedy's five-scene sequence reprises the fads and headline events of the past 25 years.

"I like the way it follows the development of women, as shown by this one woman, in a quarter century," the star says. "It's a kind of history of where I've been, along with a long line of other women."

Her Broadway contract extends into October. She might opt for an extension, but already has two film projects programmed. A future ambition is to become a director "but I don't want that as long as I am acting."

Her private life centers upon a suburban home with her 13-year-old son and a number of dogs and cats.

"Frustrations? No, I don't have any. I'm happy. I keep things in proportion."

Simian protest

I would like to know why they took Planet of the Apes off. I thought it was a real good show. Where can I write Randy Mantooth? — Tammy Michaelson, Duluth, Minn.

Planet of the Apes was cancelled because it had a low rating, but you couldn't prove that by the large number of people who have written me to protest that cancellation. And to seek information on Roddy MacDowall. As for Emergency's Randy Mantooth, write him at Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Voiced but unseen

Who does the voice of Carlton the doorman on Rhoda? Also is the actor who played the professor on Gilligan's Island dead? — Steve Williams, Little Rock, Ark.

Lorenzo Music is Carlton's voice. Music produces Rhoda. He and his partner David Davis also created The Bob Newhart Show. Russell Johnson, who played the professor, is alive.

Alive, alive-o

There are two questions I want to ask. One: Is Clayton Moore, who played The Lone Ranger, still alive? Two: Is Raymond Massey still alive? — A fan, Lubbock, Tex.

Both gentlemen are still alive. Massey and his wife are just about a daily fixture at lunch time at the Beverly Hills Hotel's Polo Lounge.
